Bratacha—Festival of Flags & Emblems

Ten years ago in May 2013, Ireland's first festival of flags and emblems was held in Dún Laoghaire staring on 'Europe Day' May 9th 2013.

Dún Laoghaire Rathdown County Council, National Maritime Museum of Ireland, Dún Laoghaire Harbour Company (now abolished) and the Genealogical Society of Ireland, as the lead organisations, worked with a host of other groups and societies over many months to deliver the programme of events. These included a major exhibition, a wonderful concert, seminars and talks, Ireland's first international parade of flags and emblems, and the unveiling of the flag (right). Then GSI Directors, Tom Conlon, Eddie Gahan, Stan Zamyatin and festival financial controller, Billy Saunderson, were pivotal in the planning and successful organisation of this important event.

Richard Shakespeare, Dún Laoghaire Rathdown County Council and special guest, Graham Bartram, The Flag Institute (UK), unveiling the "Mountains to Sea" flag designed by the late Andrew Gerard Ball. This flag was flown over the County Hall at weekends until circa 2020.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Next January marks the thirtieth anniversary of the reorganisation of local government in the greater Dublin region when Fingal County Council, South Dublin County Council and Dún Laoghaire Rathdown County Council were established on 1st January 1994.

Each of the new County Councils received new coats-ofarms from the Chief Herald of Ireland and set about creating a new "county identity" for the institutions and citizens of their administrative areas. Hopefully, planning has commenced in each of the local authorities to mark this important anniversary by way of commemorative publications, seminars and the hosting meaningful public debate on Irish local government in these areas since January 1994.

GDPR & GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH

The Icelandic Data Protection Authority rejected a complaint of a data subject who demanded the enforcement of the data subject's right to erasure against a controller's genealogical database.

Irish Defences Forces 1922-2022

OUT NOW— Eoin Kinsella's landmark history of the Irish Defence Forces was official launched in Dublin City Hall on Thursday 20th April 2023 by An Tánaiste, Mícheál Martin, TD, Defence Forces Chief of Staff, Lieutenant General Seán Clancy, and NUI Chancellor, Dr Maurice Manning

'Irish Defences Forces 1922-2022' by Eoin Kinsella and published by Four Courts Press in March 2023. ISBN: 978-1-80151-036-3 : 360pp : H/ bk : large format : full colour illustrations : Catalogue price: €30.00 : Web Price: €27.00. (This was previously flagged as certainly a book to watch out for in the January 2022—Vol. 17, No. 1, issue of 'Ireland's Genealogical Gazette')

Tracing its history to the foundation of the Irish Volunteers in 1913, the Irish Defence Forces has evolved beyond recognition from the force that emerged in tandem with the new state in 1922. Plunged immediately into the chaos of a bitter civil war, the path towards a professional Defence Forces during the 1920s and 1930s was rarely smooth, with progression hampered by internal dissent, political neglect and limited financial investment.

The island of Ireland possesses a geopolitical and strategic importance that belies its size, and the difficulty of creating and maintaining a force capable of defending Irish neutrality was brought home during the Emergency (1939–45). Those years saw the greatest mobilization of manpower in the history of the state, an achievement quickly forgotten as the Defence Forces were allowed to return to the doldrums in the late 1940s.

Revitalization came following Ireland's accession to the United Nations in 1955, as the Defence Forces emerged as a core component in the UN's peacekeeping efforts and a vital – if underappreciated – element of Ireland's international relations. At home, the Defence Forces' duty to aid the civil power became ever more important with the outbreak of the Troubles in Northern Ireland in 1969. In recent years a number of important challenges have emerged, both internally and externally, with the Defence Forces compelled to adapt to changing demands at home and abroad.

This richly illustrated book explores the landmark successes and achievements, struggles and missteps of the Defence Forces over the past century. Highlighting the men and women of the Army, Air Corps, Naval Service and Reserve, it offers the first complete overview of the development of the Defence Forces from the foundation of the Irish Free State to the present day. [Text FCP Website]

HERALDRY IRELAND

On 'Europe Day' Tuesday 9th May 2023, the Society will host the inaugural 'Annual Heraldry Ireland Lecture' with guest speaker, Mr. Martin Goldstraw of The Armorial Register, on the topic 'Do It Yourself Heraldry - The Design, Assumption, and Registration of Armorial Bearings'

In many countries around the world, such as Ireland, the United States, Italy, and Spain, citizens are free to assume their own coat of arms. There are usually few restrictions on assuming a coat of arms, for example, the design must follow the rules of heraldry, one cannot copy another person's coat of arms, or it cannot contain illegal symbols in that country.

Thanks to this, we can all have our own coat of arms, allowing us to use the symbolic and communicative power of heraldry to display our heritage, family history, love of place and, of course, to identify ourselves. In this way, many people around the world, of all ages and backgrounds, assume their coat of arms, and this is happening with a growing trend due to the spread of heraldry through the internet and social networks.

The heraldry, which has distilled a written and artistic language over centuries that allows us to project our identity with prestige, clarity, universality, and permanence, reaches us in this third millennium full of strength and freshness, and, therefore, the assumption of a coat of arms uses to be a source of joy for individuals and their families.

On May 9th – "Europe Day" we celebrate Peace and Unity Day in the European Union, and we have chosen this day because heraldry is a common heritage of all Europeans, which we have taken with us around the world and that especially unites us. This is because there is more visual and spoken proximity between the painted and written blazons of European countries than between our own languages, such as Irish, French, English, Spanish, Italian...etc.

Mr. Martin Goldstraw is the author and illustrator of the Cheshire Heraldry website and the books on Cheshire Heraldry, The Visitations of 1533 to 1580. He is also one of the two Directors and a founder of the publishing company The Armorial Register Ltd., and his lectures are always engaging and highly informative. GSI Honorary Herald

EIGHTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

Back in May 2005, after a very long period on the resting (awaiting obsolescence or repeal, which ever came first) on the Irish statute book, the National Cultural Institutions Act, 1997, was finally commenced by the Minister, John O'Donoghue, TD.

With the belated implementation of the 1997 Act, the Minister appointed the first of the Board of the National Library of Ireland with Gerard Danaher, SC, as its chairperson. The Board appointed Fergus Gillespie, MA, as the Chief Herald of Ireland under the Section 13 of the 1997 Act.

Section 13 of the 1997 Act, (a compromise needed to progress the bill in Scanad Éireann) is fundamentally flawed and all, at the time, knew that it would have to be revisited to address the anomalous position of Arms grated between April 1943 and May 2005.

After eighteen years and many attempts at amending legislation, Section 13 of the 1997 Act remains fundamentally flawed with little or no hope of remedy.

GRANT OF ARMS

'From Dirt and Dips to Dryrobes - Bathing in Dún Laoghaire through the ages' by Eileen O'Duffy

(h/b, 132pp, ills, ISBN 978-1-914488-19-1)

This excellent book by Eileen O'Duffy begins with 'The Washhouses' which reminds the reader how public baths originated from a communal need for cleanliness when most people did not have running water in the houses so washed their clothes in the washhouses and themselves in the adjacent indoor heated swimming pools. Sea swim-ming became popular in the 1800s with bathing machines and huts used on Killiney Beach but over time the machines became obsolete and were no longer used while huts remained as changing rooms. Unlike today when water quality is important to bathers, up to 40 years this was not measured and not conveyed to them.

This excellently researched book looks at the history of baths and bathing from the public baths and washhouses of the 1899s and 1900s to the present day open sea swimming and shows how these activities have altered to reflect changing times and social life, with an excellent array of illustrations recalling the various changes that took place in fashions and conventions over time.

Running to over 130 pages with numerous illustrations drawn from a variety of sources, this is an essential book for those interested in social history and the local history of the Dún Laoghaire. This excellent book is available from Dalkey News, Castle Street, Dalkey, Hewett's Newsagent, Monkstown, and the Irish Design Gallery beside the dlr Lexicon. James Scannell, FGSI

Monthly Newsletter of the Genealogical Society of Ireland

PRÉCIS OF THE APRIL LECTURE

Tuesday April 11th—Speaker: James Scannell on 'Rough Justice - Crime and Punishment in early 19th century Dublin'. This very interesting talk looked at how law and order operated in Dublin in the early part of the 1800s when there were over 220 offences on the statute book which were hanging offences with transportation to Australia as the alternative to imprisonment for more than two years and used up to the early 1870s. The establishment of the Dublin Metropolitan Police in 1838 brought law and order to the streets of Dublin leading to a reduction in the crime rate in what up to then had been a lawless environment. Up to 1869 hangings took place in front of both Kilmainham and Newgate Prisons and were witnessed by thousands of people but thereafter these were carried out within the confines of these prisons and away from the public gate in purpose built execution rooms.

The second half of this talk recalled the sentences imposed by the courts on offenders for even minor offences, one unique one being the perception that an arrested person who could not account satisfactorily where goods found in their possession came from, was assumed to have stolen them and was charged with theft. Offenders were sent to prison as an alternative to fines imposed if they were unable to pay them. In the case of juveniles these were often sent to prison for a number of weeks before being sent to a reformatory for a number of years.

While in the late 1800s the emphasis was on rehabilitation rather than punishment, severe sentences were the order of the day for minor offences in an era when society considered the maintenance of law and order as a priority item and yet was not prepared to provide social welfare for those living in poverty which forced some into a life of crime in order to survive.

NEWFOUNDLAND—TALAMH AN ÉISC

Here is a short précis of the talk at the AGM in March. Dr Edmund Gilbert of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (RCSI) gave an overview of the results from the latest study to use the Irish DNA Atlas to reveal insights into human history. The study investigated the British and Irish ancestry found in the Canadian population of Newfoundland, where genealogical records suggest a substantial migration of Irish fishermen in the 1700s and 1800s and subsequent isolation in the north-west Atlantic. Led by researchers in RCSI and in collaboration with the Genealogical Society of Ireland and Sequence Bioinformatics Inc, Canada, the study used the Irish DNA Atlas and other Irish and British ancestry references, to find substantial genetic links between Newfoundland, and Ireland and England. These links suggest the communities within Newfoundland descend mainly from either south-western English (Protestant) or south-eastern Irish (Catholic) migrants.

Even today this ancestry is echoed in different regions of Newfoundland, where Irish ancestry is highest in the Avalon peninsula to the south-west of the island. This Irish ancestry is still strongly associated with Catholic background, with researchers finding evidence that Protestant-Catholic religious differences was one reason for the genetic isolation of communities in Newfoundland. By comparing the sort of genomes in Newfoundland to those in Ireland and Britain the project also demonstrated the genetic legacy of the European settlement in Newfoundland, where modern Newfoundlanders are descended from a population bottleneck dated to around 300 years ago, aligning with migration records from the time.

BREAKING NEWS: Just as we were going to press we learned that the results of this hugely important DNA study were recently published by Nature in its 'Communications Biology' see https://rdcu.be/daX8Q

This study has provided the potential for new research opportunities, possibly between the Memorial University in St. John's, Newfoundland and the newly established SETU South East Technical University in Ireland.

The "Gazette" is Ireland's longest running monthly genealogical newsletter and it is read by thousands each month around the world.

The past issues of the Society's newsletter from 1996 to 2016 had been fully indexed by the late Brendan Hall, MGSI. The "Hall's Index" now includes all issues right up to date and is available on www.familyhistory.ie

Although we're not members of the National Union of Journalists (NUJ), the team at the "Gazette" always endeavour to operate in accordance with the NUJ Code of Conduct www.nuj.org.uk/about/nuj-code/ and in line with the 'National Policy Statement on Ensuring Research Integrity in Ireland' which was endorsed by the Genealogical Society of Ireland back in June 2014 soon after its launch at the Royal Irish Academy. (see the June 2014 issue of the "Gazette" at www.familyhistory.ie)
